

JEANETTE ROWSEY

F O R T H E H O U S E

Hello - I am Jeanette Rowsey, a Democratic candidate for the West Virginia House of Delegates, District 17, representing communities in Huntington in Cabell and Wayne counties.

I am a Marshall University graduate and small business owner. I provide consulting and training services for non-profit organizations with a focus on children's mental health, child development and child abuse prevention. In 2013 I wrote and published the regional bicentennial history book, The Lost Village of Barboursville.

I am running to be a strong voice for women, children and working families, and to work for the well-being of seniors, veterans and disabled West Virginians. My legislative priorities include fully and immediately addressing West Virginia's drug addiction crisis, diversifying and growing the state's economy, strengthening education, and reversing the exodus of our bright young people from West Virginia.

This year marks my 35th year of marriage to Chuck Minsker. We have two adult sons and daughters-in-law, and a granddaughter. This is my first run for political office, but I am an active church and community volunteer, currently serving on the boards of Pea Ridge United Methodist Women, W.Va. United Methodist Annual Conference Archives and History Commission, the Carter G. Woodson Memorial Foundation, Democratic Women's Club of Cabell County, Cabell County Public Library, and the Greater Barboursville Community Outreach feeding program.

I would be honored by your vote to represent our Huntington area neighbors, and hope to meet you soon.
